Extract and full Relation of the Defeat of the Swedes, dated from the Isle of Rugen, Nov. 19.

AFTER the Confederate Troops had happily made their Descent at Strelsan, so as that in less than two Hours all the Infantry were landed, they began immediately to Retrench. The King of Sweden had no sooner heard of it, but he immediately assembled 2000 of his best Cavalry, divided into 20 Squadrons, and set 1000 Infantry behind them for making the more Haste, with intention to hinder the debarking of our Cavalry, which took up a great deal of Time, and could not be all effected that Night. He advanced with this select Body on the 16th early in the Morning, and coming upon us at the rising of the Moon, he attacked our Left Wing in a furious Manner; but seeing that our Cannon was planted there in the first Line, which fired two Shot for one of ordinary Cannon, he turned towards the Right Wing, where there were the three Danish Battallions of Prince Charles, Cignon, and Jutland, in Number 1500 Men, and attacked them in Flank. His two first Attacks were very furious, but as ours did not fire till they were near enough to be sure to do Execution, and we having a Ditch before us, they were forced to retire. They returned however again to the Charge with more Resolution, designing to pass the Ditch, and not knowing that we had lined it with Chevaux de Frize, they threw themselves into it, where being unable to proceed, they lay in heaps upon one another, and could not help themselves, so that we had nothing to do but to kill them with our Bayonets: At this Juncture General Dewitz came in with 1000 of our Horse who were newly landed, and charged the Enemy in Flank, which made them give Way and fly in Disorder. 'Tis supposed the Swedes had made no Provision for Retreat, being perswaded they should Conquer, for they fled in single Plottoons, and so many of them were killed in the Pursuit, that the Roads were covered with the dead and wounded Bodies of Men and Horses. There were but a small Number that could escape into the Retrenchments of their Fort of Old Fahr, General Dewitz with the Cavalry having cut off their Retreat. Whereon Sunday in the Afternoon more of our Horse were landed, Detachments were sent all over the Island, who have already brought in 188 Officers and 1000 Soldiers. 'Tis computed that the Enemies were 6000 strong, and that Baron of Sweden, (who was wounded in the Leg, after having had two Horses killed under him,) has carried off with him to Straelsund but 200 Men, others say 700. On the 17th, after we had buried the Dead, and inter'd the Body of Major General Bassewitz to be transported to Gripswalde, to be there buried, our Army came before the Fort of Old Fahr and summoned the Garrison to surrender; but they demanded a few Hours time to send to their King for his Directions, which being granted, at the End of three Hours they sent Answer that the King ordered them to defend themselves to the last drop of Blood, and if they disobeyed him he threatened to put them all to Death whenever they fell into his Hands. There were at the same time some Officers in the Place who had deserted their Posts after they were taken Prisoners at Tonningen, for which Sentence of Death was some time ago pronounced against them in a Council of War; these sent to the King of Denmark to know if they might be pardoned, and that Sentence against them be revoked, if they surrendered, without which they would defend themselves in Desperation, seeing if Death only were to be their choice, 'twould be more honourable to receive it with Sword in Hand. His Danish Majesty granted them Pardon, and then they, with all that were in the Fort, surrendred themselves Prisoners of War. Among them were 4 Majors General, Namely, Stromfeld, Mellin, Meyerfeld, and Marschal, besides a great many other Officers; and the private Soldiers were 200. On the Banks of the Island that were most accessable we found 78 Pieces of Cannon, whereof 8 were Brass.

His Danish Majesty lodges in the Fort, and his Prussian Majesty in a Village a quarter of a League from it. We being now Masters of the Fort and the whole Canal, all the Avenues from Straelsund are so close shut up, that not a Soul can stir thence. The only good Luck the Enemy had, was, that our Cavalry were not all landed, otherwise none, even the King himself, had escaped.
